The Junction: £2 million centre opens to boost Life Chances

The Junction in Cathall Road, Leytonstone officially opened last week – a new vibrant hub of council services under one roof boasting large investment and new convenience for borough residents.

Waltham Forest Council has spent £2 million providing state of the art classrooms for Adult Learning Services as well as refurbishing the Children and Family Centre facilities on the site. The Junction also offers art and creative skills classes, hosts the Harrow Green Community Library and will be a base for North East London Foundation Trust (NELFT) health clinics. The Early Help team will also be located at The Junction, providing targeted support to vulnerable families.

The Junction is an immediate demonstration of the council's commitment to improve the life chances of residents, as set out in its 'Creating Futures for Young People' plan launched in September.

Officially opening The Junction, Leader of Waltham Forest Council, Cllr Clare Coghill said: "The council is committed to improving the life chances of our residents throughout their lives and centres such as The Junction do just that, offering educational and skills-based courses to help their careers as well as support for families.

"I'm also delighted to announce that we will be extending the contract for The Lloyd Park Children's Charity to run Children and Family Services here for a further two years to make sure our residents get the help they need."

The Children and Family Centre will provide a wide range of support and activities for babies and young children up to four-years-old, encouraging their learning and development through play.

Clare continued: "The world of work is changing rapidly, with residents facing increasingly complex career choices, and facing greater job insecurity. Given this level of uncertainty we are determined to invest in services that will give a helping hand to residents when it's needed."

Residents will be able to access a broad range of exciting training courses designed to help them back into work or get a better job. Courses include English, mathematics, employability, business administration, as well as arts and crafts. There are also several courses aimed at specific careers including hair and beauty, health and social care and apprenticeships.

Resident Marcia Scarlett, of Walthamstow, completed a computing and customer service courses through Adult Learning Services and has used the Children and Family Services in the borough.

She explained: "I have already gained a qualification, more independence and a local job as a carer through Adult Learning Service support, and am now helping new volunteers at a charity. I know how much a centre like this can help people."

The council has matched money from the Mayor of London's Skills for Londoners programme, which provided a £72,422 grant, to equip the classrooms. This will give residents' learning a head start by offering them the opportunity to experience the latest technology many employers also use.

New sexual health services launched

Cllr Naheed Asghar joins the team from Barts Health to celebrate the new service

New sexual health services that give Waltham Forest residents better access to contraceptive choices officially launched last week.

Cllr Naheed Asghar joined the celebrations at the new All East centre of excellence in Stratford, which is supported by conveniently located clinics throughout Waltham Forest.

The services, provided by Barts Health NHS Trust, offer contraception choices in the same place as sexually transmitted infection testing and treatment, and wider contraception choices.

Waltham Forest clinics are available at Forest Road, Boots Walthamstow, St James Medical, Silverthorn Centre and Triangle House Health Centre on Harrow Road. Since the new service was first introduced earlier this year there has been a 17 per cent increase in people in Waltham Forest taking up long-acting contraception options.

Vanessa Apea, Barts Health consultant in sexual health and HIV said: "We're delighted more people are being able to choose the right options for them. We've worked really hard to make our clinics as good as they can be and our new website helps make our All East services even easier to access."

Last week, also saw the launch of a new website for the service to give Waltham Forest residents better access to sexual health advice, support and services. It helps people quickly find the right information, book appointments online and order 'test at home' kits for sexually transmitted infections.

From the Leader

Cllr Clare Coghill

Violent crime, drugs and weapons are a scourge on the streets of Waltham Forest and the council is committed to working closely with the police to proactively target drug-dealers and known gang members. For this reason, I joined the police on their early morning raids in Waltham Forest last week, resulting in 20 arrests and the seizure of a handgun, a sword and a large amount of drugs. We all want to see more action like this so that we can see a reduction in the levels of violence on our streets. It's vital that we create opportunities for our young people to show them there is a better way than going down a path towards violence.

To give our young people the best start in life and ensure they become the leaders of the future, I setup the Life Chances Commission in 2017. The report published in September is a comprehensive assessment of the journey our young people take from birth, toward meeting their ambitions in adulthood, including the obstacles that prevent them achieving these goals. One of the themes of the report was just how important the years before they reach school are. In Waltham Forest, we have some excellent preschool nurseries and family services and with many parents qualifying for free places, it is a disappointing that many continue not to utilise them. To ensure Waltham Forest Council continues to improve our facilities for young and old last week we opened The Junction in Leytonstone – a new centre, providing extensive Children and Family Services, Adult Learning Services and more, under one roof following a £2 million investment in the facility.

It's not just for our young either; the Adult Learning Service will also be based at The Junction supporting more than 4,000 residents each year in a range of skills, especially basic skills in English, maths and employability. The Junction's Children and Family Centre services provide vital specialist services for young families in the area supporting more than 2,500 people each year.

As part of the Life Chances Commission report, 'Creating Futures for Young People' the council will build further on this investment by focussing on assessing and improving childcare options in the borough.

We all have a role to play in ensuring young people get the start they deserve and ongoing support to achieve their goals throughout life. In this edition, we highlight the financial help many new parents can access with regards to childcare and link to the council's list of resources and services parents can access to ensure they support the raising of resilient, confident and healthy young people who will become the leaders of the future.

Mayor of London visits Leyton to talk air quality funding

The Mayor of London paid a visit to businesses in Leyton as he announced a new round of air quality funding last month.

Sadiq Khan visited Francis Road, which was recently improved through the Enjoy Waltham Forest programme with the introduction of a timed road closure between 10am and 8pm, improved paving and new planting and seating. He was joined by Council Leader, Cllr Clare Coghill and Deputy Leader Cllr Clyde Loakes to announce that London councils could now bid for a further £6million from the Mayor's Air Quality Fund to tackle air pollution in the capital.

The Mayor also met members of ZED, the zero emissions delivery service, which was established after the council secured funding from a previous round of the Mayor's fund and school pupils who are Air Quality Ambassadors in the borough.

The Mayor said: "Our filthy toxic air is a national health crisis, contributing to tens of thousands of premature deaths in the UK every year. The bold action we've already delivered such as establishing Low Emission Bus Zones, cleaning up the bus and taxi fleets and delivering the T-Charge in central London, are starting to have a positive impact. This funding will help boroughs to deliver targeted action to complement these strong measures and improve their local areas for the benefit of all Londoners."

In recent years Waltham Forest Council's Enjoy Waltham Forest programme has delivered 22km of segregated cycle lanes, 660 new trees, 37 roads closed to through traffic and 15 new pocket parks. It has also provided free cycle training and bike hire for adults and children, living, studying and working in the borough.

Recent research has shown that the borough's residents are the most active in outer London and that the infrastructure changes are encouraging people to be more physically active. Reports have also shown that air quality in the borough is improving meaning that residents' life expectancy is being extended by at least six weeks.

Cllr Coghill added: "We know that air quality is a huge concern for our residents and sadly around 270 people in the borough die from illnesses related to air pollution every year. Therefore, we've made tackling this issue a priority through the Enjoy Waltham Forest programme and our work with the Mayor's Air Quality Fund.

"Thanks to our actions, the life expectancy of Waltham Forest's young people has significantly improved and we've cut the number of households in the borough facing dangerously high levels of air pollution by 90 per cent."

In brief

Fresh ideas for school dinners

Students at secondary schools across Waltham Forest have been providing feedback for inclusion in new lunch menus for the winter term.

Working with Waltham Forest Catering Services – who provide school meals for local schools – student councils have come up with some tasty new healthy and nutritious dishes that are both affordable and reflect the diversity of school communities.

Details of the choices available are on new, pocket-sized menus and every meal comes with unlimited salad, vegetables and fresh bread.

New water stations are also popping up in secondary school dining rooms, offering students free water some with fruit infusions.

Students interested in catering careers have also worked alongside chefs in the school kitchens to boost their skills and knowledge. Chefs have joined in school assemblies to explain good food choices and borough schools have run workshops where young people can try their hand at different recipes.

The school meals service is working to provide a market-leading fresh food offer at local schools. They work with organic and sustainable food producers and organisations including the Soil Association and Sustainable Seafood. The pocket-sized menu includes prices, with main meals costing just £1.75. Students can now pay for their meal digitally in many schools, so they are not dependent on carrying cash to buy lunch.

Pedal power: ZED celebrates anniversary

Zero emissions delivery has been a great success

ZED, the zero emissions delivery service created by Waltham Forest Council, has celebrated its first birthday.

The service, which was established after the council secured money from the Mayor's Air Quality Fund, has become an essential service for many local businesses helping them to thrive and expand.

ZED uses delivery bikes, trikes and an electric van to courier packages from local businesses in Waltham Forest including an organic farm, a coffee roasters and bakers and florists to their customers in the borough as well as in central London, actively tackling congestion and air pollution on the capital's roads.

As well as serving local businesses, the ZED team deliver items for the council, including library books to residents who are unable to leave their home, providing a vital service which helps vulnerable residents stay connected to the local community.

Over the last year, the team has grown to include twelve riders who work flexibly, while earning the London Living Wage. So far, they have delivered over 8,000 packages, cycling in excess of 7,700 kilometres, saving an estimated 2,300kg in carbon emissions.

ZED Waltham Forest manager Oscar Godoy said: "This year we have worked with our clients to get established and provide them with a competitive delivery service. We've become an essential part of their business by ensuring their goods arrive at their customers with a big smile from one of our couriers."

Last month, the team met the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan when he visited Waltham Forest to announce the next round of Mayor's Air Quality Funding in Francis Road, Leyton. The Mayor also met owners of Venner store, a homeware and gift shop, who use ZED to courier their stock in from local suppliers.

Mr Khan said: "Waltham Forest is an example of a good council working with City Hall to make the quality of life better for their residents, dealing with local pollution hotspots."

Tiff Howick, co-founder of the shop, said: "We specifically chose to open our store in Francis Road because we liked the idea of the road being pedestrianised. There have been lots of new businesses opening up in recent months and there is a great community atmosphere among us and our customers.

"ZED, the zero emissions delivery service, provide us with a great service bringing our stock from our local suppliers across Waltham Forest. They are a great friendly local team, who really care about their customers and the environment."

Local businesses can trial ZED's services with £100 of free credit.

Life Chances: Early years in focus

Play session at a Children and Family Centre Hub

Leading childcare experts agree that the first 1,000 days of a child's development are some of the most significant, with a material impact on their long-term development. All young people in Waltham Forest deserve the best possible start in life, with no one left behind.

It is for that reason that the council has opened a new Children and Family Centre – which also offers adult learning services – in Leytonstone, called the Junction. This is one of the first big steps the council is taking to improve life chances as part of its plan: 'Creating Futures for Young People'.

Overall, the early years services provided in the borough are some of the best in the country, as recognised by the Life Chances Commission. Early years providers are nationally rated by Ofsted as 'good' or 'outstanding', in a similar way that schools are. The proportion of three and four-year-olds taking up their early years places at a 'good' or 'outstanding' provider has reached 98 per cent, higher than both local and national averages.

The improvement in the quality of early years provision has resulted in the number of children achieving a 'good' level of development in the borough increasing by 12 percentage points over the last four years, which has been above the national average for both boys and girls for the duration of that period. The borough is seventh best in the country for early years achievement among children eligible for free school meals; 67 per cent of these children achieved a 'good' level of development in 2016/17.

However, the Life Chances Commission noted that the number of parents making the most of their free childcare entitlement is low in the borough, and that low income and disadvantaged families, in particular, lose out. In their recommendations to the council, the Life Chances Commission said the council should promote early years services online, work with providers to attract top early years professionals, and research further into why the number of parents using their free childcare entitlement is low.

The council will implement all of the commission's recommendations as part of its plan to improve life chances: 'Creating Futures for Young People'. Following the launch of The Junction, our new Children and Family Centre, some key actions the council will take include:

- Carrying out an assessment of childcare options in the borough and sharing results in the spring
- Starting a programme of parent champions and support
- Holding a celebration event to recognise those who provide excellent early years provision
- Publishing a new Early Years strategy

Life Chances: Need to know

The Life Chances Commission was set up in 2017 by Leader Clare Coghill to investigate how young people's opportunities could be improved. The commission included experts from education and business backgrounds as well as young people and set 30 recommendations for the council to improve life chances. The council responded last month, committing to action across four priority areas: ensuring every child gets the best start in life, providing a good quality education for every child, supporting young people to be resilient, confident and healthy, and giving young people the opportunities to flourish. The council also pledged a new way of working: designing and delivering the Life Chances programme in collaboration with young people, parents, schools and partners.

New gallery space

Hannah Ford of Innovative Numbers discusses the scheme with Waltham Forest Council Leader, Cllr Clare Coghill

Residents can look forward to a new viewing gallery for local artists following completion of a major upgrade of power facilities at 1b Coppermill Lane in Walthamstow.

UK Power Network (UKPN) owns the building, which has a sub-station behind the shop front. They removed the 1950s transformers and switching gear through the shop window before installing new equipment. This has been planned to cope with expected future demand as regeneration and improvements take place in the area. The work has taken just one week to complete, minimising disruption to residents and businesses in the area, and cost a total of £100,000.

Now that UKPN has completed the sub-station work, the council's contractors, Mulalley start work this Monday 8 October to restore and refurbish the shop front. This is part of the St James Street Heritage project, which has been working with local retailers to improve shop fronts in the area.

When completed, the shop will be used as a window gallery showcasing work of local artists and managed by local art collective,

Invisible Numbers.

The gallery is due to open in December and will be put to good use during 2019, when Waltham Forest is London's first Borough of Culture. Invisible Numbers have already been busy on the site painting the hoardings that will be in place while the work happens.

Hannah Ford, from Invisible Numbers, said: "Our aim is to bring the community together to provide a platform for local, London and national artists. From the beginning we have been involved with the council by helping prepare the brief for the work and we are looking forward to the gallery opening as it will be a really positive step forward."

Waltham Forest Council Leader, Cllr Clare Coghill, said: "This project has been a long time coming to fruition, almost 20 years, and we are grateful to UKPN for giving us this opportunity to provide a space for many talented and creative people in our community to showcase their work to the hundreds of people who walk past here every day."

Open call for artists to join London Borough of Culture official programme

London Borough of Culture 2019 has announced an open call to artists from across the world to take part in a major new series of seven projects and be part of the creative programme that will be delivered across Waltham Forest.

The exciting initiative for artists is open to creatives across all disciplines – from the visual arts to theatre, dance to poetry – and will offer people the chance to work with Waltham Forest's local communities, helping shape the first ever London Borough of Culture.

Each project will explore how culture informs identity in one of seven wards of Waltham Forest. One opportunity partners with Waltham Forest's award-winning William Morris Gallery to offer a visual artist the opportunity to be Artist in Residence, exploring new responses to William Morris' legacy and to the gallery.

The remaining six opportunities will be open to artists of any discipline. Three will be offered to artists based in East London and three to those based anywhere worldwide.

Sam Hunt, Creative Director of London Borough of Culture 2019, said: "We are excited to be launching this open call for artists to help define the first London Borough of Culture. We have not restricted this open call to art form but are really interested in working with individuals and groups who share our ethos of ensuring everything we do is in some way co-created with the communities of the borough."

Cllr Clare Coghill, Leader of Waltham Forest Council, said: "This is an incredible opportunity to tell the stories of Waltham Forest. If you have a bold, ambitious, imaginative idea for the London Borough of Culture programme, we want to hear from you.

"Whether you're a choreographer, theatre maker, writer or musician, you can be a part of this epic celebration."

Rowan Bain, Senior Curator of William Morris Gallery and Vestry House Museum, commented: "The team at the Gallery are looking for proposals that approach Morris and his legacy in new ways. The successful artist could take inspiration from any aspect of Morris' life and work, from his approach to craft and design to his ideas about the environment and social equality. Resident artists are always encouraged to experiment and take risks – the bolder the better!"

The deadline for submitting all proposals is 11.30pm on 14 October and a selection panel will take place on 2 November.

Artists can find full details and apply at walthamforest.gov.uk/ArtistOpenCall.

The artist projects are one of many initiatives London Borough of Culture 2019 is offering to enable organisations and individuals to tell Waltham Forest's stories. Earlier this month, Waltham Forest opened the Fellowship Funding scheme, offering £500,000 to help the next generation of local talent find their feet and make their mark.

A second open call has been announced for an artist residency which will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Bauhaus movement, one of the most influential art, design and architecture movements of the 20th century.

Meet the Legends: Belinda

Legends of the Forest is the name given to the borough's band of volunteers who will be central to ensuring the success of Waltham Forest's Borough of Culture Year in 2019.

Belinda Calaguas moved to Church Hill, Walthamstow in 1993 from the Philippines. We asked her about her experiences of Waltham Forest and why she has signed up to be a Legend of the Forest. She said: "When I saw the (Walthamstow) market I said I'm not going anywhere else, I'm going to stay here, because it's lovely. It's diverse.

"I've always worked in the volunteer sector, particularly in social justice issues in the UK, and international development. All of that has introduced me to the need for people to get involved, and to be part of something bigger than themselves.

"I love the idea that we can be Legends of the Forest. I think people should consider becoming a legend. It will give you a new experience, you will probably learn new skills, and you will make friends along the way."

Time for Grime

Jammer – producer, rapper, MC, DJ and a driving force in the grime scene from day one

Social enterprise Beatroots Creative has announced a project to celebrate the borough's contribution to the creation and development of grime music, Grime Waltham Forest.

In November, a series of events will take place across the borough to shine a light on the artists, producers and promoters who helped to create the grime genre back in the early noughties. These will include gigs, film screenings, panel discussions, talks and lyric writing and beat-making workshops.

As part of the project, MVP

Workshops is running a film-making project for 16-25 years olds, starting in October half-term. The group will create a documentary about the history of grime music in the borough that will be screened during Waltham Forest's year as the first London Borough of Culture in 2019.

Grime Waltham Forest partners include Chantelle Fiddy, Diesle D-Power, Girls of Grime, Lemzi, MVP Workshops and Stow Film Lounge.

Winning High Street design announced

This September, 230 residents booked tickets to hear six presentations from artists, designers and architects with a vision for Walthamstow High Street. Each artist introduced their ideas for how to improve the Rosebank Villas route between the High Street and the bus station.

Following a vote from the public in the audience after six presentations from the panel, Ed Crooks' Walthamstow Supernova concept was chosen. This will now be developed into a detailed design before being implemented. The £2,000 prize money is a fixed fee to support Ed Crooks in researching the materials, colour scheme and installation process. He will be working together with Matter Architecture to ensure the proposal forms an integral part of the improvements to Walthamstow High Street and market.

Work will begin on site in spring 2019 following Waltham Forest's Borough of Culture launch in January.

The Design Competition is supported by the Great Place Scheme through Arts Council

England and the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Making Places projects underway

Launch of 'The Shade' in Aldriche Way. Credit: Jenna Selby

Making Places is an initiative by Waltham Forest Council to deliver creative projects across the borough, which will have a lasting impact on communities and neighbourhoods.

Waltham Forest residents nominated sites across the borough that they wanted to see transformed. Twenty of the nominated sites – one in each ward – are now set to become the locations for exciting new arts and culture projects.

'The Shade' is open in Aldriche Way

'The Shade' is a new community space designed and built by young people from Aldriche Way. The project, led by Build Up Foundation, was unveiled on Sunday 16 September at a launch event attended by Leader of Waltham Forest Council, Cllr Clare Coghill.

Workshops with Build Up Foundation were attended by 53 young people, who participated in designing the new community space. A further 16 young people aged between 14 and 18 helped with the construction process, learning new skills and investing time in improving their local area.

This new community space is somewhere where local residents can meet, relax and play. The Shade features a pergola, garden, seating and table tennis on an area of tarmac that has been empty since the estate was built.

Albert Crescent Long Table

'Albert Crescent Long Table' is a new eight-metre long table and seating installation for South Chingford, designed by architects Barr Gazetas as a focus for community events and gatherings. The installation launched on Saturday 22 September. Love South Chingford group cut the ribbon with Valley Ward councillor Cllr Jemma Hemsted.

Highams Park Gates

Architects Merrett Houmoller attended the Picnic in the Park event in Highams Park on Sunday 9 September. The local community was given the opportunity to vote on their preferred colour pallet for the interior metalwork of three new gateways for the park.

Up next: 'TriO' Attlee Terrace Launch Friday 19 October

TriO is a new community space by the drawing shed that sits within The Sunken Garden on Attlee Terrace housing estate. TriO comprises of three spaces: Garden Shed, an all-season space for community celebrations, artists residencies and workshops; Garden Store, a store for tools and equipment; and Garden Bed, a small mobile performance platform. TriO has been designed by Matthew Lloyd Architects, Sahra Hersi and the Risner Brothers.

The local community is invited to join the drawing shed and the Sunken Gardeners for the launch of TriO on Friday 19 October from 6 to 9pm. A newly commissioned poem will be performed by artist Stephanie Ampofo and there will be pizza and cordial from Today's Bread.

Community champions win prestigious London In Bloom Awards

The Wood Street South Gardening Club dug deep for glory

Congratulations to the borough's gardening stars – Waltham Forest's green credentials have been recognised by London in Bloom this year with a whole host of awards won by our community champions.

The awards celebrate community gardeners, residents and organisations that develop and enhance green spaces across London.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment said: "I'm delighted that so much of our community champions' hard work has been rewarded with these awards. They take great pride and I'd like to say a very big thank you for all their work to green our neighbourhoods which is truly inspirational. We're all Team Waltham Forest and together we're making our borough cleaner, greener and loved."

Helen Smith and Stavros from Wood Street South Gardening Group are delighted with their Greener Street Awards: "Our goal has always been to take our love for green spaces to our community and on to our streets – to green-up every available space we possibly can! Receiving this Greener Streets Award from London In Bloom is a wonderful affirmation of all that our street gardening residents have achieved."

Ralph and Elizabeth, from the Cleveland Park Residents Association said: "We would like to thank everyone that helped in any way to achieve these wonderful results. Our three streets looked a picture on the judging day and we were very pleased when the judge for London in Bloom said in his report that Cleveland Park was a credit to all involved."

"Thanks also to Waltham Forest Council and Stow Brothers for their support during the season. Community and street gardening is a very rewarding activity because you are always meeting people and getting to know neighbours better. We are looking forward to 2019."

Helen Lerner from Walthamstow Village in Bloom is delighted to have won so many awards, "These fantastic results recognise the hard work put in by hundreds of volunteers from gardening communities across the borough."

When it comes to getting your hands dirty, thinking globally but acting locally helps mitigate climate change, reduces pollution, increases biodiversity, grows communities and improves mental health and well-being.

Good news for green fingers

TEAM WALTHAM FOREST

- Over 25,000 bulbs available for local community groups and schools
- Flowers specially selected so that displays improve year-on-year
- Free compost also available from borough car parks

Gardeners and home growers rejoice! The annual Waltham Forest Council bulb and compost giveaway is returning for autumn 2018 – it's a great chance to get together with your neighbours and plant some new flowers to brighten up a local grassy area, flower bed or tree pit and put a smile on people's faces as they pass by.

The council has 25,000 bulbs to give away, which include hyacinths, daffodils and crocuses amongst others. Community groups, schools and gardening clubs can email: environmental.services@walthamforest.gov.uk to request bulbs.

The bulbs have been specially chosen as they are good for naturalising, which means they multiply easily and displays will improve year-on-year. The bulbs will be delivered in the weeks leading up to Friday 19 October. The bulb planting programme will begin with local schools on the Friday, and then continue with other groups over the weekend of 20 and 21 October.

That's not all – 225 tonnes of compost will be delivered to the following locations for our free compost giveaway, which starts on Monday 15 and runs to Sunday 21 October.

Collect your compost at:
Church Lane car park
 Church Lane, E11 4QN
Low Hall sports ground
 South Access Road,
 Walthamstow, E17 8AX
Kings Road Reuse and Recycling Centre
 Larkshall Road, E4 7HZ

The compost will be topped up every day until the Sunday, and residents are encouraged to stop by with their own bags and shovels to help themselves.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment, said: "We're keen to build a strong sense of community and bringing residents together to plant flowers in our open shared spaces is a great way of doing this.

It's an activity that anyone can join in with, young and old, so whether you've lived in Waltham Forest all your life or you're new to the area we'd love you to join in.

"So let's all get out there and plant bulbs at tree bases and verges. When spring comes the whole community will be able to enjoy a kaleidoscope of colour as the bulbs bloom and brighten up our streets, parks and neighbourhoods."

#inyourcorner

The theme for this year's World Mental Health Day on 10 October, will be 'talking about young people in a changing world'.

Following what our young people have been telling us, Waltham Forest Council is pleased to announce the launch of our young people's counselling online service. If you need some help or advice around how you are feeling, your relationships, stress management or simply if you just need someone to talk to, visit kooth.com. There, you can read articles produced by other young people or talk to qualified counsellors.

Waltham Forest Council is keen to work with people who have mental ill health stories, either personally or a carers, who are interested in becoming 'Time to Change' champions. ## Early morning raids take guns, knives and drugs off the streets

A series of early morning raids in Waltham Forest, targeting those suspected of being involved in drug supply and violence, resulted in 20 arrests on Wednesday 3 October.

The 19 men and one woman were arrested for a range of offences, including possession with intent to supply Class A and B drugs. A sword, a hunting knife, and significant amounts of cash were seized, and one of the men was also arrested for possession of a firearm.

The Leader of Waltham Forest Council, Cllr Clare Coghill accompanied officers on the raids. She said: "We want to see direct action being taken against those responsible for the rise in violence on our streets. I congratulate everyone involved in these raids for their hard work and determination.

"We are also working to tackle the issues that lead young people toward gangs and give them the support they need to succeed in their lives."

The raids were made as part of Project Zariba, a long-running proactive operation targeting violent offenders and gang activity in Waltham Forest and Newham.

Zariba is a collaboration between the Met's Trident and Area Crime Command, the Violent Crime Task Force, and borough officers. The project uses a range of tactics to identify and apprehend high-harm offenders and reduce violence across these boroughs.

One of the weapons seized at the dawn raids

Acting Detective Chief Inspector Jim McKee, who leads Project Zariba, said: "This operation forms part of a long-running project which targets some of the most high-harm offenders in this part of the capital."

The council is determined to tackle gang violence and drug dealing and work with its local partners and the community to build safer, stronger communities where all feel safe and welcome.

Cllr Coghill made a direct plea to residents for their assistance in keeping young people safe. "We need people who witness drug offences and violent crime to come forward and assist the police. It's not acceptable to turn a blind eye when we see people dealing drugs and committing violent acts.

"Together, we can beat the gangs and send them a clear message: You are not welcome in Waltham Forest."
